

Westborough Deaths through 1802 (Chronological) from the
Published Vital Records and the Diaries of Ebenezer and Breck Parkman

By Ross W. Beales, Jr.

This table of deaths in Westborough, arranged chronologically, is derived principally from four sources: the published vital records of Westborough and Northborough (the latter through June 24, 1766, when the Second Precinct of Westborough was made the District of Northborough) and the diaries of Ebenezer Parkman and his son, Breck Parkman, the last extant year of which is 1802.¹

The published vital records are incomplete. Anyone working with such records is certainly aware of their limitations, especially the fact that deaths are generally most underrepresented. Deaths in the Westborough vital records total 449; the Parkman diaries and other sources² record 381 additional deaths. Thus, of the total of 830 deaths, 54% appear in the published vital records and 46% in the Parkman diaries and elsewhere. The discrepancy between the 449 deaths in the vital records and the total of 830 suggests a magnitude of underreporting that underscores the limitations of the published vital records.

The Parkman diaries provide invaluable additional information not merely about the fact of a death but sometimes also the cause of death (e.g., stillbirths and miscarriages, diphtheria (i.e., “throat distemper”), dysentery, accidents, cancer, suicide) – information that is largely absent from the eighteenth-century portion of the published vital records. In addition, the chronological ordering of deaths reveals years of unusually high mortality: for example, twenty-six deaths in 1740; fifty-four in 1756.

¹*Vital Records of Westborough, Massachusetts, to the End of the Year 1849* (Worcester, MA: Franklin P. Rice, 1903); Vital Records of Northborough, Massachusetts, to the End of the Year 1850 (Worcester, MA: Franklin P. Rice, 1901). The elder Parkman’s diary is held by the American Antiquarian Society and the Massachusetts Historical Society. Breck Parkman’s diary is part of the Parkman Family Papers at the American Antiquarian Society.

²Three deaths were recorded in other sources. The death of ten-year-old Adam Holloway, who was kicked by a colt, was reported in the New-England Weekly Journal, Jan. 8, 1733, p. [2], and in the Weekly Rehearsal, Jan. 8, 1733, p. [2]. The Independent Chronicle, Dec. 20, 1782, p. [3], reported Mitty Bond’s death. Thaddeus Gale probably died in early 1756, the year when his estate was probated. The deaths of Dr. Josiah Brigham and Anna Brigham are recorded in the published vital records (WVR 231), but with no dates; that is, ____, ____, _____. Breck Parkman recorded their deaths: Jan. 9, 1788, and May 30, 1790. For Anna Brigham, see the entry under Nancy Brigham. For purposes of the tabulation of deaths, the deaths of the two Brigham are excluded from the total reported in the vital records and included in the total from the Parkman diaries.

Whilst I was there came Lieutenant Tainter, and told me we had Some other Duty to attend, for that poor Jonas Child had hang’d himself and was Dead: and it was desir’d that I would go to his House forthwith. I did So, Mrs. Parkman with me. I went up to the Scaffold and Saw him (miserable Creature!) a ghastly, lifeless Corps. How awful the Dispensation! One of the Members of the Church! God’s Judgments are a great Deep! unsearchable! and his Ways past finding out! A multitude were gather’d, and the Coroner came, Lieutenant Hezekiah Ward, the distress’d widow and Relatives desiring it, I pray’d with them and took Leave. May the Lord (of his infinite Mercy) Sanctifie this terrible Stroke to us all! Tis very worthy of my Notice that I have never had opportunity to Speak with this poor Man in all this Time of his perplexity and Temptation though I have been to his House to see him one Time after another. It fills me with Grief and Trouble. O that we might all be quicken’d - - to a consciencious Discharge of every Duty; careful improvement of the Day and Means of Grace; watchfulness against the Snares and Temptations of the Devil; against quenching the holy Spirit of Grace, or so much as grieving the Spirit or provoking Him to withdraw from us.
